Who Is an Overseas Domestic Worker?

There is no definition of 'overseas domestic worker' in the Immigration Rules. However, it is Home Office policy to treat overseas domestic workers as including cleaners, cooks, chauffeurs, nannies or other persons providing a personal service to an employer and their family.

Documents Required for an Overseas Domestic Worker Visa Application

UK Visas & Immigration will expect all of the above requirements to be demonstrated through comprehensive supporting documentary evidence.

The documents required for an Overseas Domestic Worker visa application will include, but are not limited to, a letter from your employer confirming your employment as a domestic worker, other evidence of your employment such as a contract of employment, payslips or bank statements showing payment of salary and written confirmation that you have agreed to the terms and conditions of your employment.

The exact documents required may vary depending on your personal circumstances. You may wish to consult an immigration lawyer for professional legal advice.
